IN MEMORIAM

In memory of our mother, Mrs. Phil Paulette, who passed away 8 years ago, May 22, 1954.
It was eight years ago today
That our dear Mama passed away.
We miss her more
As time goes by;
Yet we know she's happy
In her home on high.
We think of her
As when she lived here,
And we know that
We'll never find another as dear.
Although Mama has gone above,
We, her children, still have her love.
Although, Dear Mama, you've gone away,
There's just one thing more we want to say —
Dear Mama, as we face each new day,
We pray we will become more like you in every way.

HOMEMAKERS' ITEMS

Man's life span is increasing - and while this is progress, like all progress it also brings problems.

Miss Amelia Fuller, home economist at Virginia Polytechnic Institute, recently returned from a National Workshop on Aging sponsored by the American Home Economics Association at Purdue University. She says group discussions revealed that home economists already are meeting the important needs of elderly citizens through work in nutrition, design of household work areas and equipment, family budgeting, management of group food services. However, the economists hope to give more attention to changing attitudes about aging, and to the need for considering aging as a normal process of daily living.

Miss Fuller reports several recommendations made by the nation's home economists:

All home economics teaching should foster the concept that aging is natural in the life process, not to be feared or rejected. Preparation for old age begins in early years and the home economist can help develop attitudes, interests, and experiences in youth that will help later.

Home economics research must be encouraged to explore needs of the aged in relation to nutrition, housing and equipment, family relationships, clothing, and the leadership potentials of elderly people themselves.

Stepped-up services must be developed to meet special needs of older people, both in private homes and in institutional homes.

Products specifically geared to the needs of the aging need the attention of the home economist in business. The home economist is urged to promote development of such things as safety features in all consumer goods, clothing with self-help features for the hand incapaced and with style features adapted to the elderly person, foods available in smaller portions, and labels easier to read.

HEAVY SET OF APPLES
SEEN FOR THIS SEASON

Forecasts for a heavy set of apples throughout Virginia this year are the signal for orchardists to begin thinking about thinning.

Howard A. Rollins, Jr., horticulturist at Virginia Polytechnic Institute says a heavy set makes it necessary to remove some of the fruit so the remining apples will grow to top size and quality. Apples can be thinned by hand, but this is not usually practical on a large scale.

The use of chemicals to thin apples is increasing and rapidly becoming a routine commerical practice. However, if a grower is to get the best results he must understand the various factors involed in the use of chemicals.

County agents have been furnished information on the latest research findings on thinning apples with chemicals and can give detailed advise.

Its reliability is probably its greatest single asset

When you build a quality truck, the inclination is to run around asking users what they think of it. We do quite a bit of this.

It's a funny thing. You'd think people would talk mostly about the mechanical features of the vehicle—the good ride, its power, the double-wall construction, cab comfort, or tough tailgate.

These things get comment, of course, but they're consistently outnumbered by expressions of satisfaction with the dependability of a Chevrolet truck. Its greatest single asset seems to be the fact that it does its job well day after day without a lot of fuss or attention—and that's what impresses people the most.

Quality is the key to reliability. The next time you have to buy a truck, call your Chevrolet dealer and make your money go farther.
